At a distance from the building, I could see a park-like setting (scattered trees, bushes, landscaped grounds) with a solitary steel/glass structure raised on a mound of ground. Pathway went around the building with some leading to the wooded area. One would have to climb steps to enter the building, which was very modern in appearance. One upper room of the building resembled a classroom (blackboards, charts/scrolls on the wall), had windows the length of the room overlooking the grounds. Young adults (males/females) in the room.

Underground at some point (maybe under the bldg.) there was a large room blacked out one end and lighted at the other with what appeared to be scenery.

A second small room adjacent to the first was very poorly lighted, had stacked boxes, black walls and felt like a survival type room.

A third large room was a kitchen area. Although sounds of many voices (relaxed) were coming from an area adjoining this room. I can only describe the kitchen: large wooden table in the center, two large stoves to the right and large double stainless steel sink to the left.

The corridor between these rooms was dark but spotlights or bright emphasizing light was directed at "posters" on the walls.

it never when I looked down. Not in end of

There is a strong smell of burning cordite near the large room which diminishes the further you go down the corridor.
